Living like an hermit in his luxurious family mansion, Giorgio is a former lawyer in his forties. His mother died in a car accident, his father committed suicide, and the only connection he has with the real world is Agnese, the housemaid that raised him up.

Everything changes when Giorgio runs into Giulia, and the two get tangled-up in a very hot, ambiguous relationship.

The day that Agnese goes missing, the net begins to close in around Giulia and her lies. But Giorgio is hiding some unimaginable, dark secrets of his own...

Marina and her daughter
Valentina Ferragni on French magazine «Gala», 2018.

Marina Di Guardo

COM'È GIUSTO CHE SIA

(As It Should Be)

“A story so filled with suspense that it will leave the reader breathless until the very last page. Marina Di Guardo explores a dark, corrupted soul, giving us an overwhelming thriller about femicide.”
«la Repubblica»

“One of the most intriguing authors of our time.”
«Extramagazine»

“An ode to life and to women’s dignity.
An absolute must-read.”
«La Gazzetta del Mezzogiorno»

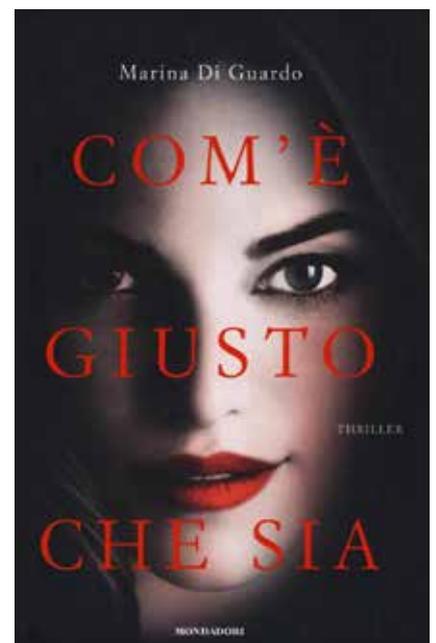

“Blond and charming – just like her daughter Chiara Ferragni – Marina writes books where nothing is at it seems, and evil and cruelty are unexpected and ferocious.”
«F Magazine»

Dalia is barely twenty, but her trust in the world is already severely compromised. Her father abandoned her before she was even born. Her mother’s next boyfriend turned out to be violent. Growing up, she developed a tight bond with her mother as they carried on with their withdrawn lives, unable to breach through the solitude. Dalia is shy, troubled by the memory of the black sun she used to draw as a child and by a recurring nightmare: the inside of a car covered in blood.

She harbours an unspeakable desire, a longing for revenge and redemption. When this deep-seated hunger is suddenly unleashed, she turns into Nemesis, goddess of revenge, determined to punish every man who thinks he controls the life and death of his women. While the monsters in her mind start quenching their thirst for blood, Dalia starts going out with Alessandro, a nice guy who had been courting her eagerly and politely. But violence can take on the most unexpected guises...

CLAUDIO MORANDINI

“SIMPLY ONE OF THE GREATEST ITALIAN WRITERS OF OUR TIME.”
Fabrizio Ottaviani, «il Giornale»

A high school teacher, Claudio Morandini lives in Aosta. He wrote radio comedies, theatre monologues and several novels. His book A gran giornate won the “Città di Trebisacce” Literary Prize in 2013. His short story Dita fredde is included in Santi – Lives of Modern Saints (Black Arrow Press, Baltimora, 2007).

Neve, cane, piede has been a real literary phenomenon: a top 5 best-seller, it won the Procida-Elsa Morante-Isola di Arturo prize in 2016 and it has been sold to UK, France, Turkey, Chile and Colombia.

In 2018, producer and director Maurizio Zaccaro acquired the novel's film rights.

In August 2018, Salani published his first children's book Le maschere di Pocacosa, and from 2019 his new novels will be published by Bompiani.

Recent titles:

- 2018: Le maschere di Pocacosa, Italy (Salani Editore)
- 2017: Le pietre, Italy (Exòrma), France (Anacharsis), Turkey (Timaş)
- 2015: Neve, cane, piede, Italy (Exòrma), UK (Peirene Press), France (Anacharsis), Turkey (Timaş), Chile (Edicola), Colombia (Laguna)

Claudio Morandini
LE MASCHERE DI POCACOSA
(The masks of Pocacosa)

CLAUDIO MORANDINI RETURNS TO HIS MOUNTAINS
TO WRITE A PRISTINE AND CHARMING COMING-OF-AGE TALE.

A RICH, INGENUOUS NOVEL, FUNNY AND SPOOKY AT THE SAME TIME.

MORANDINI TELLS AN ENCHANTING AND ORIGINAL STORY ABOUT MOUNTAIN TREES AND BULLIES.

"Your children will love it but, dear parents, take my advice and steal this book from them. You won't regret it."

Elio Grasso, «Pulp Libri»

"A book written in a state of grace.

A gentle and eccentric story about the atrocity of bullying."

Gabriele Ottaviani, «Convenzionali»

Even though he's 12 years old, Remigio is afraid of masks. But there is a reason for that: in his village, Pocacosa, people go crazy around Carnival time; hidden behind scary masks, they raise hell and Remigio knows that his schoolmates will pick on him because he's the top of the class. So he has no other choice than to run away to the mountains, where he will learn how to prepare himself. With the help of the old hermit Bonifacio, he will understand that fear is not a weapon to use against others, but an emotion that we all must feel and master.

Claudio Morandini

NEVE, CANE, PIEDE

(Snow, Dog, Foot)

NUMBER 5 ON ITALIAN BEST-SELLERS LIST, FEBRUARY 2017
SOLD TO UK, FRANCE, TURKEY, CHILE, COLOMBIA

"Le chien, la neige, un pied est un récit saisissant et cruel, déroutant, semblable à ces histoires légendaires que l'on aime à raconter à la veillée".

Florence Courriol-Seita, «Le Monde»

"A clever story with two peculiar characters. This book is one of those mysteries that I would love to witness all the time."

Michela Murgia, Rai 3 - Quante Storie

"One of the most competent and astonishing novelist of our literary scene".

Umberto Rossi, «Pulp Libri»

"This is an impeccable short novel, full of attention to detail and musical rhythm".

In the Alps, there is a lonesome valley where the old and scatterbrained Adelmo Farandola wanders, crazy with solitude.

Adelmo's only companion is a nagging dog; together they form an unusual comic pairing, since Adelmo is able to understand its talking as well as those of other animals of the mountains. He also understands the voices of the wind, the sky, and even of the dead.

Struggling in the wild and hostile nature around him, we follow him in the changing of seasons and in the repetitiveness of his actions: but then one day, as spring arrives, Adelmo and his dog notice a foot in the melting snow. Snow, dog, foot is a strange little book that one can read cover to cover, enchanted by its characters and their sarcastic profundity.

Claudio Morandini
LE PIETRE
(Stones)

TO BE PUBLISHED IN FRANCE AND TURKEY IN 2019

“Balancing immanence and metaphysics, Morandini creates a ghost story that rolls gloriously down the mountainside.”

Michele Lauro, «Panorama»

“Morandini embraces a mystery and he paints it with humour.”

Alessandro Beretta, «Corriere della Sera»

“Unpredictable, fiendish and spiteful: these are Morandini’s stones.”

Giorgio Vasta, «la Repubblica»

“A choral and polyphonic novel. Comic and dramatic at the same time, this story is sharply ironic and deeply realistic.”

«Il Libraio»

In this novel, everything is in motion. There is a little town in the Alps, Sostegno, where all the locals keep moving to and from the mountains; the river too is never still, changing its shape overnight. But most of all, the stones can’t stay idle. Bizarre events happen all the time, and the stones make their way into homes, fields, everywhere they can. Until they appear in the living room of an old couple’s “villa”, and the story unfolds with echoes of Ionesco and Buster Keaton. A funny and choral novel where past and present merge and collide, just as if they were stones rolling down the mountainside.

Alessio Arena

LA NOTTE NON VUOLE VENIRE

(The Night doesn't Want to Come)

“Alessio Arena has a burning and melodious writing.”
«la Repubblica»

June 8th, 1953. The transatlantic Homeland has just crossed the strait of Gibraltar, and that is where Gilda Mignonette dies. Old, sick and alcoholic, Donna Gilda will always be remembered as the “voice of Neapolitan music” and “Queen of emigrates”.

The guagliona Esterina Malacarne, her personal assistant and lover of Gilda’s husband Frank, recalls the Queen’s career in New York City and the people she surrounded herself with: Frank Sinatra, Rodolfo Valentino and, above anyone else, Federico García Lorca, a father figure to Esterina and Frank’s bastard child.

Filled with passions, gangster’s battles and conflicts with the FBI, The Night Doesn't Want to Come is a portrait of the dangers hidden behind the glamour of the Roaring Twenties.

Rewriting the legend of this Edith Piaf ante litteram, Arena takes the reader through the charming world of the first “Italians in America”, a reality full of contradictions, compromises and foolish hopes.

ALESSIO ARENA was born in Naples in 1984 and he lives in Barcelona. He is a singer, writer and translator.

He is author of L'infanzia delle cose (“Giuseppe Giusti Opera Prima” prize), Il mio cuore è un mandarino acerbo and La letteratura tamil a Napoli (Neri Pozza, 2014).

He translated Alejandro Palomas’ novels Capodanno da mia madre and Un figlio (both published by Neri Pozza).

As a singer, he toured Italy, Spain, Czech Republic and Chile. His latest record, La secreta danza, is written and interpreted in Spanish, Catalan and Italian.

He is currently working on a theatre project on the life of Gilda Mignonette.

Alessandro Zaccuro, «Avvenire»

A solitary farmer, Leo Vialetti lives in a valley in Liguria. He is passionate about olives and graft, but he is also a poacher. And he has an obsession: to buy a crumbling villa that the City will auction in 2024. The owner is a supposedly dead desaparecido called Raul Porti. In 1976, before his disappearance, Raul had been Leo's tutor and their lessons took place in the same villa that now Leo, almost sixty years old, is willing to purchase.

Once he has sold his best piece of land in order to take part of the auction, Leo decides to go looking for Raul in Argentina, and this journey will lead him to discoveries that he never thought possible.

MARINO MAGLIANI was born in 1960. He is a novelist and translator from Spanish and Dutch. He lives in Netherlands, by the North Sea. His novels have been published by Sironi, Instar Libri and Longanesi. Some of his novels have been translated into Dutch and German.

Florence, 1977. Once a famous movie star, Molly Buck dies in a private clinic. Sitting outside the front gate, there is a young man that she chose as her biographer. In their sleepless nights together, he had meticulously recorded his muse's memories and her life unfolds now through their voices. This is the beginning of a backwards tale that follows Molly Buck's career, from her retirement to the splendor of her younger years. But nothing is ever as it seems... Goodbye, Molly Buck is a circular novel on memory and its lies, investigating the power of words and how it can be able to redeem a whole existence.

Born in 1986, VITO DI BATTISTA studied Comparative Literature in Florence and Bologna. He writes on «Nuovi Argomenti» literary magazine (Mondadori).

LE FORMICHE NON HANNO LE ALI

(Ants do not have wings)

BASED ON AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL FACTS, ANTS DO NOT HAVE WINGS IS THE STORY OF TWO WOMEN SHARING THE SAME TRAGIC FATE: THEY ARE BOTH FORCED TO GIVE UP THEIR FIRSTBORNS FOR ADOPTION.

“Gentilini’s novel is brutal. Her voice is sharp and set to strike and make you suffer. And her ants are the inspiration behind this beautiful memoir, with their thin and undying path that will lead them – just like her – to salvation”.

In the '70s, Emma is a girl who constantly suffers from her father’s tyranny and abuses. No one in the family can overcome his depression and deep anger issues. When she is 17, he rapes her. After she finds out she’s pregnant with his child, her only option is to give up the baby, leaving him in the hands of a sleazy and unknown doctor.

At the beginning of the century, Margherita falls in love with a boy from a very rich family and she has no one to turn to when he impregnates her. After being separated from her baby, she decides to emigrate to America.

One day, these two dark, bloody and brave lives will unexpectedly cross.

Telling the true story of one of her ancestors and, most of all, her own, Silva Gentilini raises a painfully honest and gracefully bold shout for redemption.

Born in 1961, SILVA GENTILINI worked for more than twenty years as story-editor for an Italian TV station. She was also a free-lance journalist for «Cosmopolitan» e «Moda». Ants do not have wings is her first novel.

IL CASO LETTERARIO DELL'ANNO

(The Next Literary Sensation)

“Visinoni’s writing is deeply enjoyable and stellar.”
«Finzioni Magazine»

“Frigging serious, despite the craziness of the plot, the pop scenario and the overflowing sarcasm.”
«I libri sono viaggi»

Born 30 years ago in Iceland, Leifur lives in Bologna. A former promising writer, he is now unable to complete a novel and he sells ideas for potential best-sellers to other writers.

The Next Literary Sensation begins when Leifur’s future self pays him a visit to pass on the winning lottery numbers for some years to come, so that he can go on living as a kept man.

With the help of a Dwarf in fur and a mysterious femme fatale, Leifur embarks on a journey from Bologna’s cafes to his Icelandic hometown, facing his unknown parents and impossible formulae to travel back in time. But what is the true meaning of his trip? He is truly looking for money, or this is an attempt to end the once-forsaken novel that could be his highway to success? And most importantly, will success be a guarantee of happiness?

The Next Literary Sensation is a brilliant satire of today’s popular imagination and ordinary myths.

Born in 1981, MARCO VISINONI lives in Bologna. This is his second novel.

L'INATTESA PIEGA DEGLI EVENTI

(The unexpected turn of events)

The question is: what would have happened if Mussolini had won World War II? The answer begins with this book, first of a three-part series.

Being a sport journalist, Lorenzo Pellegrini is asked to go to Africa to report the local football championship. It's the '50s and Italy still rules over its “black” colonies. Over there, Lorenzo will soon find how “italianization” is just a facade, because prejudice and racism are the true rule. But the problem is that something is happening in his country as well: with Mussolini getting closer to death, Italy is shaken up by an impending political crisis.

LA NOSTRA GUERRA

(Our war)

Set in the years between 1942 and 1945, Our war recounts Lorenzo's coming of age, as he leaves behind the comforts of middle-class lifestyle and he struggles with being an evacuee. While Italy goes to war with the Allies, his education is made of first love, friendships, betrayals and air raids. Thanks to the author's vivid imagination, the second chapter of Brizzi's epopee has the same bittersweet taste of most renowned movies from the Italian golden age.

Dacia Maraini – Claudio Volpe

IL DIRITTO DI MORIRE

(The Right to Die)

“Dacia Maraini’s true calling is to write, carrying on a dialogue: the only compensation that is possible with regards to the dead and the living as well.”

Veronica Raimo, «Corriere della Sera»

One of the most famous and esteemed Italian writers – winner of “Premio Strega”, “Premio Campiello” and “Prix Formenton” –, Dacia Maraini is a long-lasting bestsellers author since 1962.

The Right to Die is the account of her conversations with three times nominee of “Premio Strega” Claudio Volpe, a lawyer, writer and one of the most promising voices of Italian Millennial generation.

Their thoughts and examples move from everyday life to literature and from ancient mythology to current news reports, trying to answer a question as big as the human kind itself: do we have the right to manage our own death? And if so, what is the role that politics must play to ensure this freedom?

Born in 1936, DACIA MARAINI is a well-renowned writer and awards winner. Her latest novel has been published by Rizzoli in 2017. In 2013, the documentary I Was Born Travelling about her life portrayed the story of her imprisonment in a concentration camp in Japan, to the legendary journeys around the world with her partner Alberto Moravia, her close friend Pier Paolo Pasolini and opera singer Maria Callas.

Born in 1990, CLAUDIO VOLPE moved from Sicily to Rome, where he studied Law. Three of his novels have been nominated to “Premio Strega” and he won the “Premio Internazionale Franco Enriquez” and the “Napoli Cultural Classic” prize. With Member of Parliament Anna Paola Concia, in 2014 he wrote an essay on homosexuality and gender-based violence.

Francesco Permunion - Bruno Schulz
LA PLASMABILITÀ ARTISTICA DEL CARTONE E IL SUO IMPIEGO NELLA SCUOLA.
UNA RELAZIONE SU BRUNO SCHULZ
(The Artistic Malleability of Cardboard: A Report About Bruno Schulz)

“Permunion’s writing is lasting and enduring, just as his rightful place inside the Literary scene.”

Paolo Colto, «Corriere della Sera»

“One of the best writers of the last twenty years.”

Guido Caserza, «il Mattino»

“Permunion’s gaze turns even the most ordinary things into unsettling matters.”

Roberto Carnero, «il Sole 24 Ore»

“Francesco Permunion is indeed a part of a literary genre: his own.”

Romano A. Fiocchi, «Nazione Indiana»

It is somehow peculiar the amount of books written on Bruno Schulz, and it almost looks like a way to make up for the unfair loss of a great deal of his work. Permunion took the chance for an “imaginative approach” with regard to Schulz’s life and art, combining mischievous erudition and bizarre invention. Written with the voice of one of Schulz’s student, this crooked biography recounts true and plausible facts, as well as the speculation on a mysterious lost-book by the Pole author: a technical report about the Artistic Malleability of Cardboard and its Scholastic Use.

Born in 1892, BRUNO SCHULZ is regarded as one of the great Polish-language writer of the 20th century. He was killed by a German Nazi in 1942. His novel, short-stories and critical essays have been translated, amongst other, to English, French, Italian, German and Spanish. Several of Schulz’s works have been lost.

Born in 1951, FRANCESCO PERMUNIAN’s novels have been published by Rizzoli, Nutrimenti and il Saggiatore. He won Volponi Prize (2013) and Comisso Prize (2017). His works have been translated to Spanish and French.

RIACE, IL PAESE DELL'ACCOGLIENZA

(Riace: An alternative model of Racial Integration and Refugee Hospitality)

The Guardian: «Pro-refugee Italian mayor arrested for 'aiding illegal migration'»

October 2nd, 2018

"This is all true. This is Riace, glimpses of a future between old walls and decrepit buildings."

Domenico Lucano

(Mayor of Riace. Listed by Fortune magazine as one of the "World's 50 greatest leaders" thanks to his immigration politics)

"Welcoming migrants the way he did it, Lucano is a precursor and example for integration."

Laura Boldrini

(Spokesperson for the UN High Commissioner for Refugees)

In Riace, a town in Calabria, gods arrived twice. First when two male bronzes were fished out of the sea after centuries, and another time in the Summer of some years ago, when a boat of Kurdish refugees reached Riace's shores. They were fragile and scared gods, and they found hospitality. Many landings followed, and Riace's abandoned apartments were given to the immigrants together with a job training in ancient crafts. They became a part of the social context, thanks to the visionary mayor of Riace, Domenico Lucano.

This reportage is the story of his capacity to welcome those who come from poverty. In the meantime, Mayor Lucano saved his own town, whose population now includes more than 6,000 migrants from over 20 Countries. And this is how Riace became a sustainable model to handle the European refugee crisis: a model of cohabitation based on exchange and mutual interest, both for refugees and for the development of local communities, that Wim Wenders recounted in his short movie Il volo (The Flight).

Professor of Philosophy at the University of Milan, ANTONIO RINALDIS, has published many essays and novels in Italian and French.

BUT BECAUSE OF THE DISGUST OF WHAT WAS HAPPENING.
THAT'S WHAT I WANT TO BELIEVE".

Liliana Manfredi

"This story is like a flower blossomed from an heap of atrocity".

Beppe Carletti [soundtrack composer]

MOVIE ADAPTATION *LA RUGIADA DI
SAN GIOVANNI* (2016)

Liliana Manfredi was the only survivor of a Nazi massacre in June 1944. She was 11 years old when 35 innocent civilians were killed at Bettola, on the hills of Reggio Emilia. But Liliana's story has something more that makes it unique. A Nazi soldier discovered Liliana hidden in the grass and, instead of giving her the deathblow, he took her and gently left her on the main road, risking the martial court in order to save her life.

For a single, short moment, the eyes of a child put a stop to the ferocity and two human souls found a reason to come together.

*I'm seventy years old and I was born twice.
The first time it was in my mother's house,
on April 29th 1933.*

The second time I was on the grass, beside a house turned to dust by the Germans.

I had three bullets in my body.

That Nazi pointed the rifle in the middle of my eyes.

Then he looked away, and saved my life.

IL SUONATORE MATTO

(The Mad Piper)

IN 2018, BRITISH AUTHOR AND FILMMAKER DAMIEN LEWIS GOT IN TOUCH WITH MATTEO INCERTI TO CONGRATULATE HIM FOR HIS BOOKS AND HIS RESEARCHES, AND TO ASK FOR HIS HELP REGARDING A NEW LITERARY PROJECT THAT HE IS CURRENTLY WORKING ON.

Over the years, articles about The Mad Piper and the story of David Kirkpatrick have appeared both on Italian and international newspapers and websites, including «Corriere della Sera», «The Times», «Deadline News», «The Scotsman», «The Herald», «Scottish Daily Mail» and «Carrick Gazette».

“Mad Piper’s bravery has Italian fans in full voice”.
«The Times»

“Bagpiping war hero who died in obscurity in Scotland is celebrated in Italy”.
«Deadline News»

Tuscany, March 1945. A Scottish soldier from the 2° Highland Light Infantry, David Kirkpatrick looks bored as he peels potatoes behind the lines. Because of his eccentric and tempestuous nature, David has been punished countless times by his superiors.

One day, an unexpected message changes his life forever: The Special Forces are looking for a bagpipe player to embark in a secret mission against a very important target. Kirkpatrick volunteers for the task and, dressed up in his kilt, he parachuted on the Appennino Reggiano. From that moment, he will be forever known as the “Mad Piper”. And he helped to save hundreds of lives. Nevertheless, for the next 65 years, David has not been aware of his hero status and he kept on suffering from terrible nightmares regarding that night. But one summer day in 2010, a letter from Italy turns the last years of his life into a beautiful fairy-tale.

Born in 1971, MATTEO INCERTI is a journalist and he works as Press Secretary for a political party on the Republic Senate. He has been a foreign correspondent in Netherlands, Belgium and Scandinavia. Before The Mad Piper, he published other books, including two historical novels.

Claudio Volpe

LA TRAIETTORIA DELL'AMORE

(Love's path)

"It's wonderful how a young, so young author can be able to write with such sharp narrative strength".

Dacia Maraini

Actually, Love's path is the story of two different paths: the one that reunites a brother and a sister and the one that blossoms between two young women.

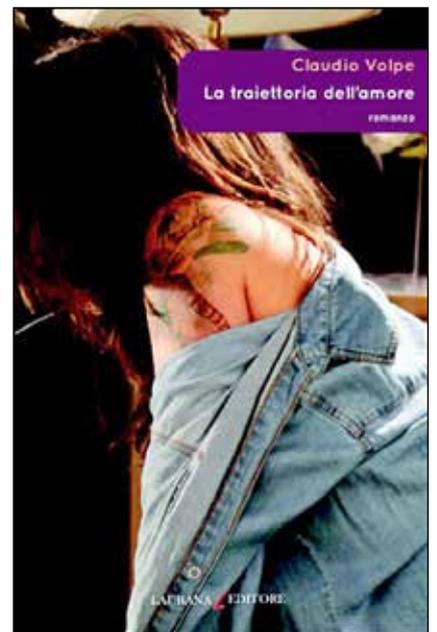

After a hit and run, Giuseppe turns to his sister Andrea for help, even though they drifted apart years before since he couldn't accept her homosexuality. But now that she lives with her girlfriend Sara, Andrea has to learn if their love can survive the weight of her past. The three of them decide to run together until they reach a little town somewhere in Southern Italy, where their troubles will finally be unraveled and Giuseppe will find the strength to deal with his blame.

Using words that every boy and girl in love can easily make their own, Claudio Volpe wrote a modern, wise and captivating road trip tale.

Born in 1990, CLAUDIO VOLPE moved from Sicily to Rome, where he studied Law. In 2011, Dacia Maraini put forward his debut novel, Il vuoto intorno, for "Premio Strega" literary prize. The same novel won "Premio Internazionale Franco Enriquez". In 2013, his second book Stringimi prima che arrivi la notte has been mentioned for "Premio Strega" by Renato Minore and Cesare Milanese, winning the "Napoli Cultural Classic" prize. With Member of Parliament Anna Paola Concia, in 2014 he wrote an essay on homosexuality and gender-based violence, Raccontami l'amore.

Nominated for 'Premio Strega' 2017

Finalist at 'Brancati Zafferana' prize 2018

Marino Magliani

L'ESILIO DEI MOSCERINI DANZANTI GIAPPONESI

(When Japanese Dancing Midges Go Into Exile)

"ME AND ANTONIO TABUCCHI USED TO WRITE LETTERS TO EACH OTHER. LOTS OF THEM, ALWAYS AT NIGHT. AFTERALL, THAT IS WHAT AN EXILE IS VERY GOOD AT: TO WALK ON THE BANKS OF A RIVER, AND TO STAY AWAKE WHEN IT'S DARK OUTSIDE".

"Magliani's writing gives back to the reader that everlasting, inner conflict that we all experience with our places and choices. And so the journey becomes a metaphor, and all we can do is to close the door behind and leave".

Alice Pisu, «la Repubblica»

"Sharp and exact, Magliani's words are as watchful as they should be".

Guido Festinese, «il Manifesto»

"Magliani pays his debts with his own past, made of breakaways, loves and places. A fragmented autobiography where no regrets are allowed".

Gianluca Barbera, «il Giornale»

A professional translator left his hometown to never go back. A voluntary exile from everything and everyone he knew, including himself.

This is his fragmented autobiography, where everything is supposed to be true because no one can say otherwise. Sea, shores, horizon, sands and waters run through the pages with the voice of nostalgia. From one exile to the other, he claims that all the people in his condition can do properly only two things: to walk on the shore and to spend the night awake.

And we keep him company in this journey, a life-long journey where he's chasing himself, a journey that will take everyone, just as it happened to Dante before us, until the gates of Hell.

MARINO MAGLIANI was born in 1960. He is a novelist and translator from Spanish and Dutch. He lives in Netherlands, by the North Sea. His novels have been published by Sironi, Instar Libri and Longanesi.

Some of his novels have been translated into Dutch and German.

SENNA. IN VIAGGIO CON AYRTON
(Senna: A last trip with Ayrton)

"I'M NOT A CAR, I'M NOT UNBEATABLE;
BUT CAR RACING IS A PART OF ME, OF MY BODY.
FOUR WHEELS, A SEAT, A STEERING WHEEL.
THEY'RE MY LIFE".

PUBLISHED IN JAPAN

"He was a sincere man, and people knew that.
As a pilot, I can easily say he was the best".
Felipe Massa

Three times World's Champion, one of the greatest pilots of Formula 1 of all times, Ayrton Senna died in Italy on 1th of May 1994. This book is the story of what happened on that weekend that changed forever the F1 world, but is also the story of the man under the pilot's helmet.

Always overwhelmed by his emotions, Senna was like a comic's superhero on the racetrack and a man with a delicate sensibility in his everyday life. People, and not only in his beloved Brazil, had learned to understand his double identity: for this reason, on May 1, the grief was collective, huge and inconsolable.

Sport reporter for Sky Tv, LEO TURRINI has been following the Formula 1 for Italian newspapers since the early 80s ("Il Resto del Carlino", "La Nazione" and "Il Giorno"). He has followed nearly 400 Grand Prix Formula 1. He wrote many books and biographies.

Sticazzi Living · Sticazzi Living 24/7 · Sticazzi Living – The Handbook · Sticazzi Living in the Kitchen · Sticazzi Living When You're Working · Sticazzi Living When it's Christmas · Sticazzi Living and the Global Crisis

A of men and women found the perfect word to show how they handle every struggle of daily life: Sticazzi - The ultimate 20th century philosophy on how you can nurture your own happiness, isolating what's really important from what is just a pain in the neck. And even when you simply have to put up with that pain, there is always another way to look at it. Forget pizza, shoes and Dolce Vita: Sticazzi is the best Italy has to offer. Because everything can be endured with a little bit of self-mockery and (a lot of) Sticazzi.

Carla Ferguson Barberini compiled a perfect guide to all those who are Sticazzi wannabes – and you're not alone, by the way: Socrates, Rossella O'Hara, and even Jesus believed in Sticazzi.

Beyond “nevermind”, more than “Hakuna Matata” and “keep calm and take it easy”, this is your most delicious and useful cup of tea.

Despite the girl's name, CARLA FERGUSON BARBERINI collective welcomes men as well. They are all professionals in the field of Communication and Publishing.
